Randomize Seeds

Begin Tournament

When the down arrow is clicked, this combo box shows recently used player names which can be selected for reuse.

When this icon is clicked, the player it is associated with is deleted from the list.

This button allows the user to randomize seeds in the event that it doesn't actually matter - this is also useful for generating random seatings / pairings.

This screen only appears when the user creates a new tournament, and it allows them to add players or teams to the game. They can change the order of player or team names in order to create "seeds".

The player/team names involved in matches that don't yet have a result can be dragged and dropped to change pairings if the user so desires. Tapping on a name brings up a small window like the below, which allows the user to input match results.

Clicking this icon saves the current tournament under its name. It is greyed out and disabled if there have been no changes since the last save.

This is the main tournament screen. It displays the current bracket, lets the user save the tournament, allows the user to share an image of the tournament bracket, and allows the user to change pairings and input results. Due to the limitations of mobile screens, brackets are displayed one round at a time and users are able to move between rounds using a selector.

Clicking this icon autosaves the tournament and goes back to the main menu.

Clicking this icon brings up the below tooltip, which lets the user share an image of the tournament bracket by way of the chosen social media.
